PRESIDENT'S LETTER

Reasons EVERY Business and Non-profit organization should be a member of their local Chamber of Commerce in a challenging economy

1. Visibility - You've heard it said time and time again, that out of sight means out of mind. This is not a smart strategy for any business, especially when times are good. A market can change quickly. Keep yourself out front and IN front of the competition.
2. Access - Unless you're crazy or like consistent rejection, no one enjoys making cold calls all day long. When you join a chamber and actively get involved you'll discover the opportunities of meeting respects who may have an interest or who can refer you to key contacts within an organization.
3. Ongoing training & education - Unless you have the luxury of a training budget or can afford to bring in local, regional or nationally known experts on different topics, there is no other organization in America that delivers timely programs at such a affordable price as the local Chamber of Commerce.
4. Networking - From seminars, lead groups, luncheons to business expos and business after business, there's absolutely no excuse for not being able to meet new contacts, referrals and people who can help you with ideas and additional ways to grow your business.
5. Low cost advertising opportunities - As far as visibility at the local level, a chamber offers a wide range of affordable advertising options and sponsorship packages for just about every business or non-profit, regardless of how big or small your ad budget may be.
Ask for details!
6. Advocacy - A foolish belief among companies, especially national retail outlets, is that they're too big or not local enough to care about getting involved in joining their local Chamber of Commerce. A few things to consider (for businesses of all sizes): Are you employees and customers local? Are taxes and school systems important to finding and retaining high quality work force? The Chamber researches, lobbies and routinely discusses with local and regional government units and politicians to keep them up to date on central issues pertaining to our membership and our community.

Phil Burch, President
